Architectural elevation drawing of a building facade. The drawing shows a vertical section with a thick grey structural frame. On the left, there are three large, empty rectangular openings. To the right of these, there is a vertical strip containing four windows. The windows are arranged as follows: a small square window at the top, followed by a larger rectangular window, then another larger rectangular window, and a small square window at the bottom. Each window contains a diagonal hatching pattern. Dimension lines are present: a vertical dimension line on the right side of the facade is labeled '1395', and a horizontal dimension line between the left frame and the first window is labeled '1145'. The drawing is a technical line drawing with no shading or color.
